

A fee-based internship placement provider program helps to match you to an internship opportunity in your field in the location of your choice. They charge a fee for their services. There are many programs out there so it can be overwhelming to choose one. This guide will give you some things to keep in mind and ask when comparing programs.

Things to know about placement programs

- Location > Internship: Unlike applying directly to an internship position, you are applying to a program in a specific location and then being matched with your internship. If you are set on being in a specific country this can be ideal. You need to be comfortable with some ambiguity until the placement is finalized.
- Placement timelines: Depending on the program and your field of interest you may get a placement fairly early, or not until right before (or right after) you arrive.
- Compensation: Most internships with providers will be unpaid. There are some cases when lunch or a commuting stipend may be provided, but this is the exception.
- Extras: Some programs may include (or have optional add-ons) of housing, local excursions, networking events, language classes, or other academic options. This is an important comparison point, depending on your interest in these extras.
- Scholarships: Some programs have scholarships available. It is good to apply early and ask about any opportunities.
- Academics: There may be language or other course options included, or they may be not-for-credit. If you need or want UW-Madison credit IIP can help with that (more details below).

Internship Placement Options through UW-Madison

- Study Abroad + Internship: International Academic Programs (IAP) and Business International Programs offer study abroad programs with an optional internship. You can earn a full semester or year's worth of credits at an institution abroad while also engaging in a part-time internship experience. The internship is arranged by local program staff.
- Internship Intensive Programs: IAP and Business International Programs also have vetted and partners with several placement programs that help you find an internship that you do while engaging in academic work. They have already vetted these programs for quality and review them regularly.

Non-UW Internship Placement Provider Programs

There are many programs to help place you in an internship. Even though they have not yet been vetted by IIP or IAP that does not mean that there are not many legitimate ones out there. However, you need to practice due diligence and research and compare to make sure that the fee you pay is worth the services they are providing you. These questions will help you get started.

- Internship Placement
 - What meaningful projects will I be asked to complete? Do you have examples of past internships in my field?
 - What is the matching process? Will I be applying to specific positions or matched? Will there be an interview with the host?
 - Will I be the only intern at my site or are there usually multiple students at each site? If so, how many?
 - What language level, if any, is required? How does level affect my placement options?
 - What are my options for duration?
 - Will the internship be full-time or part-time? If part-time, what other things will I do while there?
 - How many students are usually in this country/city at the time I want to go?
 - Is there a guarantee of placement? When should I expect to hear about my placement?

- Financial
 - Is there an application fee?
 - What is the total program cost for what I am seeking? What is included in that?
 - What are my additional expected expenses beyond that cost (e.g. airfare, meals, local travel, etc.)?
 - When is a deposit due? Is this refundable? When is the total balance due? What is the cancelation policy?
 - Can I use financial aid? What scholarships do you have available?
 - Ask yourself: how does the total cost of participating on this program compare to the time and cost of finding and coordinating an internship abroad independently (which may also be unpaid)?

- Testimonials
 - Can I speak to a past participant about their experience? Are there UW-Madison students who have participated in this program before?

- Logistics

- What are the housing options? How do the options affect cost? Will I be living alone, with a family, or with other students? Are the students local or other students from abroad?
- What visa is required? Will you assist with the visa process or will I do this on my own? (If you are not a U.S. citizen ask how your visa requirements may differ)
- Do you offer academic options like language classes, internship reflection, or culture classes?
- What other things are available such as local excursions, networking events, etc.?
- Is there 24/7 in-country support if there are problems at or outside my internship?

You may want the extra support of assistance with housing, classes, and activities and be willing to pay for these. If you would like to be more independent ask about options for placement only or if you can opt-out of things that do not fit your goals for the experience.

What IIP Can Help With

- Advising: We're happy to talk with you about programs and what you're looking for as you make your decision. Find our walk-in and appointment information: go.wisc.edu/iip-advising
- Academic Credit: If you would like UW-Madison credit for your internship you can apply for the Worldwide Internship Program. It is an online course that you do while abroad to reflect on the experience and cross-cultural issues in the global workplace. It may make you eligible for financial aid during a summer or semester to help with your program cost. This program includes credit, insurance, and emergency support from UW-Madison while you are abroad. For financial aid your duration at the internship and number of credits will affect eligibility so please talk to us and the Office of Financial Aid.

Where to Search

Rather than a blind online search, make use of program databases where you can search by criteria. These are to help you identify programs so you can do your own review and vetting! Please note neither IIP nor UW-Madison endorse any programming posted on the following websites.
